Mrs. Julia Rawlings
411 South Main Street
Lewiston, Utah 84320

Dear Mrs. Rawlings:

Many thanks your interesting letter. I appreciate your nice comments about my pending retirement -- a little less than a year from now.

In any event, our line of Helmses are from Union County, North Carolina where I was born in 1921. We are not related to any Helmses in Johnston County. Mrs. Helms is our Chief No. One Genealogist in the family!

I know you are all excited about the Winter Olympics. We will be enjoying the coverage from afar.

Sincerely,

Jesse Helms

JESSE HELMS:jb

Senator Jesse Helms
310 Newborn Ave.
Suite 122
Raleigh, North Carolina 27601

Dear Senator Helms;

A short time ago I listened to a T.V. program covering the events of your life. I enjoyed it very much.

I began wondering if you have information about your ancestors. My husband's ggg grandfather is Jesse brown. Jesse Brown left a will in Johnston County, North Carolina in 1806 naming one son, Stephen, eight son-in laws, and one unmarried daughter, Levicy. One of these son-in-laws is Willis Helms. Willis Helms also shows up as a bondsman for Levicy Brown and Jonathan Britt who are married 22 July 1807 in Johnston County, North Carolina.

Over the years, we have found documents showing names of some of Jesse Brown's daughters, but we have never found the name of the daughter who married Willis Helms. Do you know the name of this daughter? Is she your ancestor?

I realize you are very busy, but hope you have time to help us with any information you have. I am enclosing a family sheet of Jesse Brown's family as we have it. We are willing to share any information we have.

Thank you for your service. I hope you have pleasant experiences in your retirement years,

Sincerely,

Julia Rawlins

LOGAN TEMPLE

Logan, Utah 84321

09 Apr 1991

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

RE: Family File Records Management

We are grateful for your diligent support of the Lord's directive to serve your ancestors. The response to this call has been overwhelming. The Church has recently implemented a new simplified recording system oriented more to the members themselves, which provides a flexibility heretofore unrealized.

To assist you in serving your deceased ancestors and providing them with these blessings without any more delay than is necessary, the temple will release the names that were reserved for your family after 60 days, to the temple file and the ordinances will then be performed by other temple attendees, unless we have been contacted to extend the waiting period.

Your kindness and thoughtful management of your family file is deeply appreciated. We pray the Lord's continued blessings be with you in this most important work.

Sincerely,

LOGAN TEMPLE PRESIDENCY

THE LAND AND THE EARLY SETTLERS

[illegible] land in Wayne County lies flat, fertile, and stretches away in vast, cleared fields, rimed by deep forests of hardwoods and pines. This part of the Carolina coastal plain is punctuated by swamps and streams with names as distinctive and colorful as the families who settled the land: Thunder Swamp, Beaverdam Creek, Bear Creek, Poplar Branch, Colombus Creek, Yellow Mash Swamp, Calf Pasture Creek, Thoroughfare Swamp, Falling Creek, Buck Swamp, Brooke's Swamp, Wolf Pitt Creek, Stoney Creek, Sleepy Creek and Nahunta Swamp. The Neuse River is the region's only contribution to the state's major waterway system. Though the northeastern branch of the historic Cape Fear River begins in Lower Wayne, where it more accurately is called the Northeast Swamp, it is small and generally unnavigable.

When this part of North Carolina was first settled in the 1740's, the lands on the winding and muddy Neuse River were the first to be taken up.

The first great Wayne County planters settled along the Neuse River and its tributaries, men like Robert and John Fellows; Col. William McKinne Sr. and his sons Gen. Richard McKinne, Col. William McKinne Jr., and Gen. Barnabas McKinne; Thomas Cox; Col. Joseph Green; John Dickson; William Whitfield and his sons Needham Whitfield, Bryan Whitfield, William Whitfield Jr., and Lewis Whitfield; Dr. Andrew Bass; and John Grimes. Smaller planters began to take up land north of the Neuse around Nahunta Swamp in the mid-1740s.

These early plantations were bought and sold with some regularity. Land speculation was a common practice, and such prominent land speculators and N.C. Attorney-General Robin Jones of Northampton Co., and John Gray Blount of Beaufort Co., cousin to the [illegible]e County Yelverton family, owned land [illegible]e south side of the Neuse River in what became Wayne County. The creeks and swamps have occasionally changed names. No longer do we find Blunt's Branch, and Calf Pasture Creek on the map, and until 1881 Thoroughfare Swamp was called Buck Swamp. Today the map of Wayne County shows Buck Swamp in the place of Brooke's

Wayne County, From the Price-Strother map of North Carolina, published in Philadelphia in 1808. Note the places marked in Wayne County: Horn's, Cobb's, Raford's, and Stanton's bridges; Bass's and Green's ferries; the Quaker Neck and Contentnea meeting houses; and the seats of General Richard McKinne, William Whitfield and Peter Peacock. budding of a large local landed gentry began to develop.

One of the problems in the settlement of plantations in this region was the absence of good roads. The Moseley Map of 1733 shows no significant settlement in the Duplin-Wayne-Sampson area. Collet's Map of 1770 shows the Whitfield settlement at White Hall, and Holley's Mill on the upper reaches of Goshen Swamp in what is today Sampson Co., and there are two roads that cut through what is now Lower Wayne County. Both roads began at Duplin Court House (located on the present-day boundary between Duplin and Sampson counties near Magnolia) and forked in northern Duplin with the east fork going to Whitfield's at White Hall,and the west fork cutting up through Thunder Swamp and going to "Dickson's" which was the ferry across the Neuse River near the Court House (later Waynesborough). There was also a road that ran from Whitfield's Ferry westward across the county, paralled with the Neuse River, to the Duplin road to Dickson's Ferry. The Mouzon Map of 1775 shows these same roads, which join at Nahunta Swamp and move on to Tarboro in Edgecombe County, as a major roadway. The Price-Strouther Map of 1808 shows a considerably improved road system with roads throughout Upper and Lower Wayne. Good roads were necessary to get people in, and agricultural products out, and until they were developed the land had a limited value for settlement.

FORMATION OF WAYNE

tionary War, the General Assembly of North Carolina divided Dobbs County, forming three new counties, Greene, Lenoir, and Wayne. Wayne County was named for the swashbuckling Whig general, Anthony Wayne, whose personal courage was daring enough to earn him the name "Mad Anthony."

The commissioners appointed to run the dividing line of the county of Wayne were: William McKinne, Sr., William Caswell, Charles Markland, Etheldred Ruffin, and Benjamin Cobb. The part of Dobbs that was cut off to form Wayne was St. Patrick's Parish. After the initial acquisition of land for Wayne County, there was no change in the boundaries of the county until 1855 when Wilson County was formed taking a part of northern Wayne County around Black Creek.

The first court of Wayne County was held on the second Monday in January, 1780 at the plantation house of Josiah Sasser on Little River. The following gentlemen justices were present: Robert Simms, Etheldred Ruffin, Jesse Jernigan, John Handley, Thomas Williams, Stephen Cobb, Joseph Sanderson, and John Sheppard. In January, 1781 Robert Simms was elected first sheriff by the court, and Thomas Gray, Stephen Cobb, Joseph Sander-

Simms Cottage, Black Creek area of Wayne County (now [illegible]n County), was probably built by Robert Simms, the [illegible] Sheriff of Wayne County, and dates from the late [illegible]nteenth century. The house had exterior end chimneys which have been removed. This is the type dwelling that stood all about Dobbs and Wayne counties, respectfully, in the eighteenth century. Robert Simm's daughter, Keziah, and her husband, Shadrack Dickenson, lived in the house following Simms. Photo: Kate Ohno, Wilson, N.C.

Handley were appointed commissioners of confiscated property.

Jesse Cobb was appointed the first clerk of the court of Wayne, and William McKinne, Sr. was appointed the first commissioner to collect the Specific Provision Tax, as provided by an act of the General Assembly.

Since William McKinne, Sr. had been a member of the General Assembly and introduced the act to divide Dobbs County, was a member of the commissioners appointed to run the line, and was so involved in the general formation of the county, he has often been referred to as the "Father of Wayne County."

THE REVOLUTION

It is difficult to say with reliability what specific action was taken by the majority of the men in Wayne County during the Revolution. Only bits and pieces of the records throw light on the subject. There are some existing militia returns, pay vouchers for men who served at least several months in the militia, but beyond that, the records reveal very little. James Cobb, clerk of the court of Wayne County, who fled in the wake of Earl Cornwallis' advance through the county in late April 1781, was overtaken and many of the papers of the county were destroyed by the British. The British did not consider that they were legal records; they did not recognize the existence of Wayne County, being created as it was by the Revolutionary government of the state and named for an outstanding Whig general. It was regarded by the King's government as an illegal county.

The Revolution was a difficult time for the best of men, but surely it was an anxious time for those small planters who were more interested in developing their land and making a home for themselves, their wives and children, than in going to war.

On Saturday, November 16, 1765, Dr. William Houston, a Duplin County citizen and Distributor of Stamps for North Carolina, was First Wayne County Courthouse, 1783, built by Colonel William McKinne. This drawing by Roger Kammerer is based on the architectural description in the court minutes. Photo: Wayne County Historical Association.

By 1769 William McKinne was a member of the Dobbs delegation to the Assembly, the first western Dobbs County man to hold a high political office. He held this post until 1771, the same year that he accompanied Governor Tryon's army to fight the Regulators at the Battle of Alamance, where he was one of the officers of the Dobbs County Regiment. There was no western Dobbs man in the Assembly in 1774 when that group removed to another hall and declared itself to be a Provincial Convention. However, the next year McKinne was elected a Dobbs representative to the First Provincial Congress at New Bern, and at the Fourth Provincial Congress at Halifax in 1775 when the famous "Halifax Resolves" were drafted and voted approval. This was the first state declaration to authorize a vote of approval by its delegates at the Continental Congress at Philadelphia to separate from Great Britain, and thus formed one of the cornerstones of the Revolution. William McKinne was married to Anne, a daughter of John Grimes of Dobbs County, who was one of the larger planters in the region. Like his friends Green, William Whitfield, and Richard Caswell, McKinne left a distinguished progeny.

Battle of Moore's Creek Bridge, February 27, 1776, was one of the major battles in the South during the Revolution, though it was a brief encounter. It kept the colonies from being divided by the Loyalists, and put North Carolina squarely in the Whig camp. This diorama depicts the Scots Highlanders rushing the patriot line. Many Dobbs County men were in the patriot ranks which were commanded by Colonel Richard Caswell.

Slocumb Legend

For several generations the legend that Mary (Polly) Slocumb was the heroine of the fateful battle at Moore's Creek Bridge has been believed by some residents of Wayne County. Thorough research by a number of trained historians, the facts do not coincide with the legend. Mary Hooks Slocumb could not have ridden, as legend says, to the battle in the middle of the night, nor was her husband, Ezekiel Slocumb (said to be a lieutenant at the battle), a known participant at the battle, or even a member of any military company at the time. Mary Hooks Slocumb was born on February 10, 1760, and Ezekiel Slocumb was born on June 18, 1760. They were but sixteen and fifteen years old, respectively, at the time of the battle, and are not known to have been married at that time. Their child, Jesse, was born at Spring Bank on the Neuse River, in 1789, and the Slocumbs did not settle in Lower Wayne (their home in the legend) until after 1780. There is no mention of Polly Slocumb in any of the several detailed reports made after the battle, and it seems likely that a ride of sixty miles through the night by a young wife and mother, alone, a full day ministering to the troops, and a sixty mile ride back home, without rest (as the legend insists), would have impressed someone! The legend came to light in 1848 (seventy-two years after the fact) in a book published by an unreliable northern historian, was seized upon by Southern citizens with great sectional pride, and repeated verbatim by more unreliable historians.

As a result, the bodies of the Slocumbs were removed in the 1930's from the quiet place they had chosen for their eternal rest, and were taken to the Moore's Creek battlefield by Federal authorities.

Ezekiel Slocumb, in his petition before the Wayne County Court for a military pension, stated that he enlisted first in April 1780 in Captain Lazarus Crawford's company, Colonel Benjamin Exum's regiment of militia, and was at the Battle of Camden, South Carolina when General Horatio Gates was defeated. Afterward he joined Captain Jonathan Smith's company, under Colonel Benjamin Sewell, and was discharged after serving six months. He reenlisted later in 1781 and served ten months as a sergeant in Captain Jernigan's militia troops of North Carolina horsemen. During this time he was engaged principally in Wayne, Johnston, Duplin and Lenoir counties. He became a lieutenant colonel in the state militia after 1800.

The men of Wayne County did not have to go to war, the war came to them. After the fierce Battle of Guilford Court House on March 15, 1781, Lord Cornwallis, commander of the British forces in the South, withdrew, a weary, spent victor, to Wilmington to rest and resupply his army. Failing to fully accomplish his mission he set out for Virginia, anticipating a rendezvous with British general, Charles Phillips. Lord Cornwallis marched his army out of Wilmington on April 25th 1781, crossed the Northeast Cape Fear River and headed northward through Duplin County. After passing through Duplin Court House (at the present Sampson-Duplin County line near Magnolia) he headed through the countryside toward Goshen Swamp. He crossed the Goshen about the first of May and entered Wayne County at the Thunder Swamp Bridge.

The army of Earl Cornwallis was composed of a detachment of Royal Artillery with four cannon, the Brigade of Guards, the 23rd, the 33rd regiment, the Second Battalion of the 71st Regiment, the Regiment of Bose, a company of pioneers, the British Legion, and the 82nd and Hamilton's light companies, as well as a large contingent of the Quartermaster's corps of wagons loaded with flour, salt and rum. Because many rivers and creeks ran through this country, two boats were mounted upon carriages and were pulled with the army. In all, the army numbered more than 1,600 soldiers. To the plain farm families in the Wayne region, this surely was an awesome sight, a frightening one. The most dreaded part of this large army was the infamous British Legion — fierce dragoons — commanded by Lt. Col. Banastre Tarleton, a young and insensitive man who killed anyone who resisted him.

Strong and sustained tradition relates that Lord Cornwallis' first stop in Wayne County v t a roadhouse near Thunder Swamp, w the dragoons scoured the countryside for food. According to the available records this is quite probable, though Cornwallis and his officers considered the Wayne countryside more barren than they had been led to expect. Another strong local tradition relates that Lt. Colonel Tarleton and his dragoons separated from the main body of the army and crossed what is today the edge of Mount Olive on a road that led northeastward through what was later referred to as Hangman's Field (where the Bolling Chair Company is now located). Tarleton's own memoirs, published in London in 1787, state that he did separate from Cornwallis about the first of May. The British Legion crossed Nahunta Swamp and Contentnea Creek, where they met resistance at Peacock's Bridge at the then Wayne County line.

Recently the journal of an unknown Scottish officer attached to Cornwallis' army has come to light, and in it is a complete schedule of his ' 's, including his passage through Wayne County. It appears that this officer and his men were a rear guard unit acting as protection to Lord Cornwallis' army, and were passing along his path a day behind him.

On May 3, 1781, Cornwallis was encamped at William Reeves' plantation on Brooks Swamp just above Mount Olive, and near the Mills being useless by the dryness of the Season, which prevents my keeping up my stock of provisions, so as to enable me to return, if necessary, from any point of the March to Wilmington. Dispatch Transports & Provisions." He also wrote on that date to Major James Craig in Wilmington: "I would decide to embark, if sufficient Provisions & Transports were in Cape Fear. The State of your Provisions makes it impossible to return before their arrival as all might starve together, but I shall move slowly forward in readiness to come back when they arrive. Six weeks or two Months provisions for 3,000 would do. Manage every ration of your own Stock, even if necessary curtail the Allowance."

Here we learn that not only were supplies short, but the weather was dry, the local mills were not turning, and what is more important, the decision was made in Wayne County not to Legion had split off from Cornwallis' army about the day before, and were then near Davis' Mill between Nahunta and Black Creek.

The journal of both our unidentified Scottish officer and Lord Cornwallis' correspondence give us a clear picture of the British passage through Wayne County. The army entered the county near Thunder Swamp on the main road from Duplin Court House, and passed on to Reeves Plantation, and from there on up to Gray's Ford on Neuse River, (where Falling Creek enters Neuse River, and called West Point), then northwest across Nahunta to Bullhead, and on to Cobb's Mill (then in Wayne, now in Wilson County). Davis Mill was then owned by Joshua Davis, and Cobb's Mill was owned by Stephen Cobb, a distinguished citizen of Wayne County, and cousin to Jesse Cobb, an early county court clerk. Tarleton wrote from Cobb's Mill to Cornwallis: "Cobb's intimidated by a mob of three or four hundred people in Wilmington, who forced him to sign a resignation of his office. The Stamp Act Crisis, as this political episode is called in Am[illegible]n history, was one of the most dramatic [illegible]nated measures imposed by the British authorities, and doubtless affected men on the Wayne (then Dobbs) County frontier. There were strong feelings against Dr. Houston's stamps even in his own Duplin.

It was a complicated period. For instance, settlement in what is today Lower Wayne did not begin in earnest until about 1772, and when the revolutionary rumbling of armed resistance began to be heard locally as early as 1775, (the various committees of Safety had begun to organize the populace for resistance) the few men who were trying to clear land and build homes probably hoped they could avoid trouble with the civil authorities. Loyalties to hearth and home often conflicted with those of civil government.

Area Militia

During 1775 the state became an armed camp. Colonel James Moore and Colonel Alexander Lillington of the Lower Cape Fear region, and Colonel Richard Caswell of Dobbs County, were organizing militia. Some of them were prepared to march on a minute's notice, hence the name Minute Men. A roster of the Minute Men of Dobbs County reveals the names of s[illegible] from all sections of the county.

The Treasurer and Comptroller's Records for the State of North Carolina reveal an active participation among the men of Dobbs County at the Battle of Moore's Creek Bridge. A full account of the Dobbs contingent is published in full in the appendix. What is surprising is how well equipped and uniformed these Dobbs soldiers were.

Nor were local men absent from the highest levels of Revolutionary leadership. William Whitfield of White Hall, was a member of the Council of Safety in 1776 and they met at his Neuse River plantation from June 19 to July 16, 1776. Later on May 3, 1779, Whitfield was elected to the Council of State.

The enlistment of men into the Continental establishment at first went well in North Carolina, then slowed. Most men feared leaving their wives and children to march north to fight the British in Pennsylvania and New York when there were Tories at home who were capable of striking on a moment's notice and inflicting severe damage to citizens and property alike. The majority of men had small farms which they were still developing, and they did not want to abandon them for fights far afield. Consequently, the local militia was the more p[illegible]r alternative for men to remain closer to h[illegible] and also to strike a blow for freedom. Dobbs County was in the New Bern District and at the time of the outbreak of war in 1776 the ranks of the regular county militia were swelled by an influx of willing patriots, and soon men were being drafted. As time went on the militia was reorganized and additional local captain John Kennedy raised a larger company of 68 Dobbs County men, drafted for service in this region of the state. One finds in this company many Wayne County names.

Militia Leaders

In over-all command of the militia in the New Bern District was Colonel Richard Caswell, Lt. Colonel William Bryan, and Major James Gorham. The field officers of the Dobbs County Militia were: Colonel Abraham Sheppard, Lt. Colonel Thomas Torrans, First Major Martin Caswell, and Second Major William McKinne. Of all these higher ranking officers, only McKinne was a resident of western Dobbs County. If Colonel Joseph Green was the highest ranking local man in the Continental Line, Major (later Colonel) William McKinne was the county's most glittering and prominent figure in the local militia.

These military officers, with their official rank and dashing uniforms, would continue to dominate the politics of the area long after the war was won. In the republican society that was formed after the war — with its absence of hereditary titles — the old officers corps of both the Continental Line and the State Militia, boasted their former rank and social privilieges, and added distinction to the society of the state. They were the most glittering ornaments of the new republican gentry.

The most outstanding military figure in the Continental Line from what became Wayne County, was Joseph Green. On December 11, 1776 he was appointed commissary to the 8th [illegible] chasing commissary of the United States for North Carolina he was directed by the General Assembly on May 15, 1779 "to remove the Public Stores from Wilmington up Long Creek to some place of safety, immediately." Green was a member of the General Assembly from Wayne in 1781. He attained the rank of colonel in the Continental Line. His first wife was Sarah, the daughter of William Whitfield of White Hall. His father, James Green of Craven County, was a leading figure in colonial politics, and his brother, James Green, Jr., was married to Margaret (Peggy), a daughter of Colonel Richard Cogdell of New Bern, and granddaughter of George and Margaret Bell Cogdell, a prominent couple in colonial North Carolina who owned a handsome dwelling plantation in Wayne County. Peggy Cogdell Green's sister, Lydia, was married to John Wright Stanly of New Bern, who was a prominent financier during the Revolution. Joseph Green's Spring Bank Plantation, between where Sleepy and Stoney creeks flow into Neuse River, was in 1784 designated as a location for the receipt and inspection of tobacco. There was also a ferry here, and it was doubtless a staging point for material for the Revolutionary Army in North Carolina.

William McKinne

The highest ranking local man in the North Carolina Militia was William McKinne, who as early as 1749 owned large tracts of land about Neuse River, and who by the time of the Revolution was firmly established as a vital link in the organization that was being formed to run the emerging state. His chief asset, in addition [illegible]

No answer - Wow Mary here on a mission?

Try internet check her name. The F.H. temple work was done by her father's second wife!

Dear Mary Harker,

We finally decided to submit Jesse Brown's sheet to the Family History Dept to be cleared for temple work and we were pleased and surprised to find that some of the temple work was already in process. So we wrote to the family history to see who had submitted the work so we could work together and to see if we can find an answer to the ancestors of the Smiths and Browns - or even the families of the sisters of Margaret Brown.

We wondered if by chance you are the Mary Diane Harker that we met years ago at Effie Wiser's in Lewiston Utah - Again we found much valuable information from Mary Dian - when we talked talked to Nyla or is it Vyla Frost's son, ~~Gerald~~ Frost in Burley Idaho — we have hired our cousin Bert Rawlins

We has been trying to find someone who knows where you are — ~~I am~~ your note that you had done extensive field research in N.C. more leads up to suspect you might be coming

I am sending a sheet with the information we have and hope ~~we can~~ are able to get in touch with you.

CERTIFIED GENEALOGICAL RECORD SEARCHER

October 12, 1988

Thelma Woodland
98 S. 300 W.
Richmond, Utah 84333

Dear Ms Woodland:

In the past few days I have tried to find more information about your various family lines. But I am afraid that I have not been of much help.

The records which you would like most are just not available. The birth and death records were not kept by North Carolina until 1913. So this makes it almost impossible to obtain earlier vital statistics

I felt that I did about all I knew to do on the Sartain line previously, so I tried the Sharp line in Rowan County and there is a McCubbin Collection here on microfilm which has many of the old Rowan records researched and indexed. I found only the one reference to James Sharpe on the tax list of 1784.

There were a dozen or more Sharp wills in Iredell which came from Rowan, but they were all after 1800. Evidently James Sharp died in Kentucky. There was a James Sharp will in Iredell in 1825, but this would not have been your James Sharp. I could have possibly found more mention of your James SHarp in some of the published records of Rowan County, but there would have been no vital statistics.

Then I tried the Frost, Smith and Brown lines of Johnston County. I thought possibly you would like a copy of McCaslin Frost and Peninnah Smith. Evidently Stephen Brown obtained the bond, not knowing how to spell the name of his prospective nephew McCaslin Frost. It is listed on the microfiche as Catherin Frost. The little slip of paper which I had them copy was inserted at sometime in the years since the bond was obtained.

The original will of Jesse Brown is also enclosed, though it gives no new information. It is interesting that James Frost went to Johnston County from Rockingham County and there remained until his death. The general trend of migration was usually west or south and west. Not many Johnston County settlers came from west of what is now Raleigh.

Usually people married in the county in which they were reared. Possibly Jesse Brown had lived in Wayne County close to the Smiths. Of course Wayne and Johnston Counties adjoin.

My own family line was in Johnston County, hence the mention of the Frost men dealing with Matthew Handy who was evidently a merchant. My great 2 grandfather sent a bill for making a casket for burial.

There are so many John Smiths that I did not attempt him in Wayne except to note that there were several references to the name in a published record of deeds. I doubt if any vital statistics would be available.

I did run across the record of the marriage of Stephen Smith to Sarah Rhodes from a Raleigh newspaper which Mrs. Neal abstracted and published. I would assume that this is your Stephen Smith, though there is no proof.

Unless you wish me to try John Smith, I can see very little help that I could render. The previous research which has been done has been very near complete as far bach as the records are available. It is not often that I see family records which have been so thoroughly researched.

I spent some over three hours in this effort and your check for thirty dollars will be sufficient to include time and copying and postage.

Please feel free to ask any questions which you feel that this research brings up.

Sincerely,

William A. Mitchiner
